Court Commemorates 1946
‘Mendez V. Westminster’
Trial For Hispanic Heritage Month
CBS Los Angeles (September 29, 2014)

LOS ANGELES (CBSLA.com) - A 1946 case that helped to dissolve the path of segregation in California schools was commemorated Monday by the Los Angeles Superior Court, as well as by one of the plaintiffs in the historic case.

Sylvia Mendez ascended the steps of the federal courthouse and entered the very courtroom where the case of Mendez v. Westminster ultimately dismantled school segregation in the Orange County School District.

In the courtroom, over 100 high school students from East Los Angeles learned about the trial and its influence on history.

When Mendez was 8, she was denied access to a public school and was redirected to a Mexican school instead. In 1946, her parents filed a lawsuit, challenging racial segregation in Orange County.

The trial lasted three years, resulting in a victory for Mendez, her parents and Latinos seeking fair education opportunities in Southern California.

Even then, however, the integration was no easy task.
